SPORTING NEWS AND NOTES.

Yes, Sir Tim Keefe Is Still in It as a Twirler.

Pugilistic Notes of Interest—A Prosperous Bowling Club. Anybody who imagined for a moment that Sir Tim Keefe had ceased to be in it as a twirler of the sphere will find instruction in the score of yesterday's Polo ground game. The Cincinnati made just three meagre little hits off the delivery in nine innings, and their final appearance at bat for the day was marked by three strike-outs on eleven consecutive pitched balls.

Naturally, under these circumstances, and with the additional fact that the Cincinnati played ball again for keeps, another victory for New York crowned the day. The score was 4 to 2. Brooklyn, alas! failed again, and miserably, to make a semblance of a show against Cincinnati. Ward's men lost by a score of 17 to 7. Boston was defeated by Cleveland 4 to 1, the feature of the game being the wretched work of Henry, lately transferred from New York to the Forest City team.

The other Clevelanders played brilliantly. Philadelphia beat Pittsburgh 9 to 2. J. Palmer O'Connell's aggregation seems to be losing its grip. Association games resulted as follows: Cincinnati 3, Athletic 1; Louisville 6, Boston 5; Columbus 9, Washington 6; St. Louis 12, Baltimore 1. The standings of the clubs up to today were:

League	W.	L.	Draws	Pct.
Am. Assn.
New York	12	3	1	.800
Boston	10	5	1	.667
Cincinnati	9	6	1	.600
Philadelphia	8	7	1	.533
Pittsburgh	7	8	1	.467
Columbus	6	9	1	.400
Washington	5	10	1	.333
St. Louis	4	11	1	.267
Baltimore	3	12	1	.200

Parley took such severe punishment and made only a game against New York, that he was fully twenty pounds heavier and had a great advantage in height and reach, that the hawker of Collins has decided to accept Eugene Hornbaker's challenge and back Billy against him to fight to a finish, at 118 pounds.

The Chicagoans are fully aware that the New Yorkers are chasing them, and they are playing ball as if their lives depended upon it.

The Middle States Regatta Association will hold a very important meeting Wednesday evening, June 10, at the Hotel Marlborough, Broadway, and Thirty-seventh street, at 8 o'clock sharp. The representatives have been requested to bring out or photograph of their boat-houses to be used in the regatta program.

Mr. Edgar Gibbs Marney, of this city, is now satisfied that Capt. Albert W. Money, of England, is a pretty good wing shot, even though it did cost him $2,000 to find that the visitor could kill more pheasants out of 100 than he could himself. Of course it was only a difference of 87 to 82, but still that was enough to make all the bets which were made, and they were many.

The New York and Staten Island Athletic clubs are still warring over "discovery" blows, to whom and by whom neither club seems able to deliver.

The Ladies Oceanic Rowing Club, of Rockaway Beach, has fair to become one of the most important organizations in America. It closed its season June 2, and the prizes were so numerous that the club was unable to give out all. The prize of some sort, ranging from first prize, a silver ice pitcher, down to little trinkets, was given to each of the rowers.

The Orange Athletic Club have received about 200 entries for their games to be held on Saturday at Madison Field at 10 P. M. The games will be contested with the following clubs: 1. Battery, while Harry Wynn, the crack catchball pitcher, will be in the line. 2. The "Cherry Blossoms," who are admitted free to grounds and grand stand at Madison Field.

BARGE OFFICE ROMANCE.

A Baron's Pretty Daughter to Wed Her Father's Rival.

Safemaker Bentel Vainly Wooded Rosina's Mother in Germany. A well-dressed, distinguished-looking man of about forty stood in the information bureau of the Barge Office this morning with the photograph of a handsome girl in his hand, as he closely scanned the faces of the incoming passengers of the steamer Rhynland.

Superintendent of Landing John Simpson the man said he was waiting for Miss Rosina Bentel. Just then a handsome brunette of eighteen, in a black dress, with a handkerchief tied around her arm, approached from the registry desk.

The stranger spoke to her, a short explanation followed, and blushed each other over the girl's countenance. She fervently examined him and seemed satisfied with the result of her examination.

The man told Simpson that he was Leopold Bentel, in the safe business at 13 Newell street, Brooklyn. He formerly lived in a small town in Germany, and when a young man was in love with pretty Miss Rosina.

His passion was returned, but his parents had other projects in view, and refused to sanction the marriage. They were wealthy, and compelled him to marry the Baroness.

The result of that marriage was Rosina, even more beautiful than her mother. Rosina, almost broken-hearted, came to this country and prospered in business. He never married, but always thought of his lost love, and corresponded with some of her mutual friends.

Reveries came to the Baron, and when he died five years ago he left his wife and daughter in poverty. When Bentel heard of this he sent money to his former sweetheart. Six months ago the widow died and left Rosina alone in the world. Bentel then laid his heart and fortune at the disposal of the lovely Rosina, and the meeting this morning was the outcome. They left the Barge Office together and will shortly be married.

WHO DROWNED THE BABIES?

Two Handsome Infants, Apparently Twins, Found Dead in an Outhouse.

Police Put on Their Mettle to Solve the Mystery of the Tragedy. The police of Capt. Cassidy's Bridge street station and Coroner's office officials are today investigating what looks like an unprecedented case of infanticide.

About 11:30 o'clock last night Morris Greenberg, the janitor of the five-story tenement at 5 Orchard street, made a horrible discovery in an out-house in the rear of the building.

There are five of these out-houses, and it is Greenberg's custom to renovate them two or three times a week. He did so Monday, but was surprised to find last night that the machinery employed for the bench one of them would not work.

In investigating the cause of this he brought up with a hook the dead bodies of two full-grown babies. His shouts brought down several of the tenants, and Greenberg ran for a policeman.

Patrolman Adam Hladitz took the bodies to the Elizabeth street station, from which they were subsequently removed to the Morgue and the Coroner's office notified.

The bodies were those of a boy and girl, apparently twins. They were perfectly formed, had evidently been nursed, and in good health, and appeared to be about six months old.

Their skin was white and firm. There were no signs of decomposition about the neck or face to denote strangulation, nor any indication of dismemberment.

Both were wearing white garments, and the police think that the unfortunate mother had been thrown into the out-house and drowned in the pool only a few hours before they were discovered.

Where the bodies came from is a mystery. There is no midwife in the block, and Janitor Greenberg says there have been no babies or deaths in the house for the last six months so far as he knows.

The out-houses are all kept locked, and the tenants of the building have keys to those used by them. As yet Capt. Cassidy's detectives have not been able to solve the mystery.

COLLIDED IN THE NIGHT.

Steamer Kaaterskill and a Schooner Crash on the River.

West Point, June 5.—The Catskill and New York Steamboat Company's boat, the Kaaterskill, from New York for Athens, was run into by a schooner last night in the narrow bend of the Hudson River, near West Point.

The passengers had nearly all retired and the steamer was creeping slowly up the river, owing to the intense darkness of the night. Suddenly came the signal to reverse engines, quickly followed by a terrific crash.

The few loungers in the boat's barroom had just time to run up to the deck, as the nose of a huge three-masted schooner tore a hole in the side and stuck fast in the trap she had made.

A panic followed, from which no one was exempt, for even to the crew and officers of the boat the catastrophe was an inexplicable occurrence.

A World reporter on board, however, saw the schooner just as it struck the Kaaterskill, and showed no light nor sign of life on her decks.

Capt. Charles Rapson, of the steamer, narrowly escaped death. He was literally pushed out of his berth by the bowprit of the schooner and had just time to reach the main deck before the cabin became a mass of splintered timber.

Passengers rushed to the deck half-dressed in great alarm. Several colored men sleeping on the main deck started like preveries and tried awkwardly to put them on in various ways.

The first sign of life on the schooner was the appearance of a woman who rushed to the side, screamed "My God!" and ran aft.

This woman and two men comprised the entire crew of the schooner. Investigation showed that the schooner's boat had not penetrated the actual hull of the steamer, but had struck the deck and stove it up and ruined the bar cabin, where her anchor chains held fast.

The schooner had come to the rescue and towed the schooner away, afterwards sheering the Kaaterskill from the dock proximity to the rocks, where she had drifted. The schooner had brought in the rear of a very large steamer, which was broken loose and drifted upon the steamer's bow.

The damage to the Kaaterskill is about $1,500. Killed Emma and Her Tar. Both Victims of Cherry Street Drugged Whiskey Die in Hospital. Emma Wolf and her sailor companion, who were taken unconscious from the Starbuck Hotel, at 97 Cherry street, to the Chambers Street Hospital suffering from the effects of a dose of opium, have died.

It was supposed to have been drugged whiskey, but the doctor at the hospital said it was opium. He had a chest-pain and also some splinters on his side. His death probably led to the suicide. The body was removed to the Morgue to await burial.
